Sasuke heaved for a second, looking down at his lap. When he looked back up his eyes were sharp but not sharingan red.

“...How does that make someone the best frontline assault shinobi? This is only phase one! We have to have two phases so the next part needs to stay on theme!”

She wagged a finger at the nodding boy. And, suddenly worried that he would stay up all night and complete them in one go, she hastily added on extra rules. “And! You need to spell everything correctly and have the correct punctuation! I accept your terms! Let’s do this one first! Lee held up the first logic puzzle book, aged 4+. Sakura nodded enthusiastically and both ninja shook on it. (It was more of a dramatic forearm clasp but they did so with the air of a ritual so it worked out.)
