Architectural and Fictional Speculations. in New York, 1909â€™s once-tallest building, the Metropolitan Life Insurance Tower, suffered a series of unfortunate mishaps. The Century Theatre, originally the New Theatre, was a theatre located at 62nd Street and Central Park West in New York City. Opened on November 6, 1909, it was noted for its fine architecture but due to poor acoustics and an inconvenient location it was financially unsuccessful. The theatre was demolished in 1931 and replaced by the Century Apartments building.
