Buddhism spread to countries outside its homeland in India and became spiritually deeply rooted in Tibet. As the time passed, its was classified into many sects. The Bhottiyas of Sikkim are said to have migrated to Sikkim from Tibet sometime in the seventeenth century. They are the followers of Nyingma sect. They established themselves as a ruling class dominating the indigenous Lepcha. With them, Mahayana Buddhism entered Sikkim and developed as the state religion. In this paper, there is an humble attempt to throw light on the introduction of Buddhism in Sikkim.

It is believed that Guru Padmasambhava had personally visited both Bhutan and Sikkim during his travels in Tibet in the eighth century A D. Although he left no converts and erected no buildings, he is said to have hid away in caves many holy books for the use of posterity and to have personally consecrated every sacred spot in Sikkim. According to the legendary accounts, Guru Padmasambhava entered Sikkim by the “Loedly Pass” Jo-la and he is said to have returned to Tibet by way of Je-lap Pass, resting en-route on the Ku-phu and creating the Yoko-la by 'tearing' up the rock to crush an enormous dragon.

Buddhism was introduced in Sikkim by Lhatun Chempo, who was a resident of Konglo in the lower valley of the Tsangpo. His name means “The Great Revered God.” His religious name is Kun-zang nam-gye (Skt. Samantabhadrā). He is also known by the title of Lhatun nam-kha-lug-med (Skt. Abhayākāśa-deva) with reference to his allayed power of flying. He is also sometimes called Kudar Drog-dren Chithenpo (Skt. Mahāyogakhyapa).

Besides constructing a number of monasteries and shrines, he selected the sites for other monasteries. The oldest monastery founded by Lhatun Chempo is Dub-de, which was constructed soon after the consecration of Phunsog Namgyal. Soon afterwards, shrines seem to have been erected at Tashiding, Pemayangtse, Sang-nag cho-lung, over spots consecrated by Guru Rinpoche and these ultimately became the nucleus of the monasteries. It is also said that Lhatun Chempo selected the site for the Pemayangtse monastery.

Waddell, in his book Lamastein in Sikkim, has recorded a miraculous appearance of Lhatun Chempo in Sikkim and meeting with other two lamas. These three lamas convened a council and despatched two messengers in the vast for the search of Phuntsog, as it was prophesied by Guru Rinpoche. Phuntsog was brought and crowned as Choigyal (Skt. Dharmaraja) or religious king. He was at that time aged thirty eight years and he became a lama in the same year which is said to have been 1641 A D. It is also recorded that Dalai Lama sent a congratulatory note bearing his seal at the court of Guru Rinpoche, the Phurba (dagger) and the most precious sand image of the Guru as presents. This gesture bound the new king to the Tibetan government and in times of crisis he looked to the Tibetan government for protection and aid. Sikkimese records known as Bras-lijongs-Rgal-rabs state that Phuntsog Namgyal had assistance guaranteed to him, if ever he was needed by the Fifth Dalai Lama.

Subsequent to Lhatun Chempo's death in the latter part of the seventeenth century, Buddhism steadily progressed in Sikkim till latterly monasteries and monasteries filled the country. With the passage of time, the monasteries grew in size and number. At present, there are 67 monasteries. In addition, there are 132 Maniikhang and 22 Lhakhang and Tsamkhang.
Bulletin of Tibetology

(formantage or place of meditation). Among these six Tashiding is considered the most important. Pemayangtse and Phensang monasteries belong to the Nyagmapa sect. These were either constructed by Lhaton Chempo or the sites were selected by him. The monasteries of Ralang, Rumtek and Phodang belong to Kagyudpa (bkha'-grwa-pa) sect. They were constructed during the time of fourth Chogyal. Gyurmed Namgyal in pursuance of a promise made to Gyaltha Karmapa, dge thun Hieracl of Karma-Kanggudyin sect at the Tsar-pu monastery in Tibet, during the former's visit there.7

There was a rapid and remarkable growth in the number of Buddhist gompas in Sikkim between 1840 and 1860. The first gampa built in the nineteenth century was Namchi, in the south-west in 1836. In between 1840-1860, fourteen new gompas came up. All but two of these at Dallung and Yangong, were in the east or the north of the country. According to Waddel, by the year 1788, there were fourteen lamas in Sikkim, including Kechenspaun, which was founded in the very same year.8 In 1814, the capital of Sikkim, which had been at Raikotnse, was moved to the east, to Tumlong. Moreover, it was in this area around Tumlong (within a radius of ten miles) that six new gompas were constructed in the next five decades. gompas which had a total capacity for over two hundred lamas. New gompas continued to be founded, in the east mostly but also in the north, in the areas of upper Tista valley, near to the link to the trade routes northwards through the Kangra La into Tibet.9

Upto 1950, the monastic education was related to that of Tibet. The monastic education was however esoteric in higher stage and in general education was the preliminary knowledge of Logic, handicrafts and primary knowledge of health care were included together with ritualistic motivation. A Nyagmapa monk therefore becomes high in various ritualistic performances and higher esoteric practices. The monks have the customary right of performing all the religious functions of the royalty. The head lama of the monasteries of Penayangtse alone has the power to consecrate the Chogyal of Sikkim. In spite of the high spiritual status accorded to these lamas, they were also concerned with the state affairs. An ordained monk like Dorje Lopen is worshipped by urban people and his seat is usually regarded high in the monastic order. But his associate monks had a usual access in rural areas with the consent and directive of the Dorje-Lopen.

The religious and ethnological profile of Sikkim is composite by the existence of the Lepchas, who are the original inhabitants of the state and the Bhuyias belonging to the Tibet-Bumthang stock. Buddhism in Sikkim while retaining the basic principles of Mahayana Buddhism has assumed a different characteristic distinct from that of Tibet by its amalgamation with the Bon religion practised by the Lepcha in the pre-Buddhist period. A religion, moving from one country to other, undergoes considerable change in order to mould itself suitable to the changing circumstances of the land of its adoption. Buddhism therefore, accommodated the principles of Bonism and assumed a particular form among the Lepchas.

The interpretation of Buddhist ritual and local religious practices found expression in the seasonal dance festivals held in the royal temple of Gangtok, the capital of Sikkim. Some of the performances are comparable to the ritual dances enacted by Bon priests in the south eastern Tibetan borderlands. The masked priests represent fierce Bon deities and their attendants, and the dances are staged for the suppression of evil. Similar dances form an important part of the annual worship of the mountain god personifying Kanchenjunga of Sikkim. On some occasions of great ritual importance, a Lepcha Shaman, who may be male or female, become possessed by the spirit of a semi-legendary Lepcha chieftain believed to have ruled the Lepcha country when the first Tibetan settlers arrived in Sikkim.

Until 1975 there was a sense in which Sikkim was still a Buddhist state, although its links with Tibet had been snapped from about 1950 when the Tibetan uprising against the Chinese invasion took place. However, cut off now from its original religious base in Tibet and incorporated into the secular state of India, it is assumed that the Buddhism in Sikkim will continue and flourish retaining its basic principles of Mahayana Buddhism.

References:
2. Dzog-chen (Dros-chen) literally means “The Great End” or “Perfection” being the technical name for the system of mystical insight of the Nyingmapa and Khasa means “the honourable.”
4. Ibid., pp. 8-9.
8. Sikkimese Buddhism in the Nineteenth Century by Trevor Ling in the Religion and Society in Himalayas (Ed.) Tankas B. Subha and Karubaki Datta, p. 52.
Sikkim is an Indian state bordered on three sides by Nepal, Tibet and Bhutan. In 1975 its semi-independence ended when it was absorbed into India. The native people of Sikkim, the Lepcha, are mainly followers of Vajrayâna Buddhism. Large scale immigration from Nepal has now made the Buddhists a minority within Sikkim. Himalayan Kingdoms, R. Gibbons and B. Ashford, 1983.

www.buddhisma2z.com. #Sikkim #Rumtekmonastery #Buddhism Team IndianWildlifeClub visited the Rumtek Monastery in Sikkim in February, 2020. The Rumtek Monastery is one of the largest and most significant monasteries in Sikkim. It is perched on top of a hill 23 km from Gangtok. It is also called as the Dharma Center. I requested Mohit, research assistant in Buddhism studies at IGNCA, New Delhi to explain in brief the progression of Buddhism as it spread out from India. I have included a talk by him to put the visuals in perspective. In view of the COVID-19 linked locked down, Mohit recorded the talk and sent the audio to be added. The empowerment of the prayer music in the dance comes from compassion, concentration and mindfulness. Sikkim Buddhism/Buddhist. 8,499 likes · 7,055 talking about this. Page Like, Comment and Share â—â®ё‌¥â®|â¥-â®—â®ё‌¥â®ё‌¥â®|â¥-â®—â®ё‌¥â®ё‌¥â®ё‌¥-â®—â®ё‌¥â®ё‌¥â®ё‌¥-â®—â®ё‌¥â®ё‌¥. â®—â®ё‌¥â®ё‌¥â®|â¥-â®—â®ё‌¥â®ё‌¥â®|â¥-â®—â®ё‌¥â®ё‌¥â®|â¥-â®—â®ё‌¥â®ё‌¥â®|â¥-â®—â®ё‌¥â®ё‌¥â®|â¥-â®—â®ё‌¥â®ё‌¥â®. The idea of an omniscient, omnipotent, omnipresent creator is rejected by Buddhists. The Buddha himself refuted the theistic argument that the universe was created by a self-conscious, personal God. Use of statues and pictures. Hinduism - Common. Sikhism - Not allowed as considered Idolatry. Pictures of the Sikh Gurus are considered Idolatry and are not accepted from a religious perspective. Gurus maybe praised because they are equivalent to God.