Want to Read. This covers everything from Windmill Hill to Silbury Hill to the Avebury Henge and circles. I could not imagine how a village could pop up in the middle of a sacred circle until I read this. It clearly goes through the timeline of the different people who paid heed to the site, as well as those who tried to destroy it. Avebury is part of the Stonehenge and Avebury World Heritage Site because of its outstanding Neolithic and Bronze age monumental landscape. The Avebury henge and stone circles are just part of this incredible landscape and it's well worth visiting the sites listed below, not just because of the beautiful locations in which they sit, but also to get a better understanding of the significance of this globally important site.
